Confessions of volcano.

8.05.2018

Again it will be talks about myself and my relationships with my creativity. If you want just skip it. Revision of new text still on the endless road. Every time I add details and make little changes. Good that's is not novel length.

Even when I am not publish something, I write something. Better it could be described like work of volcano. No one care what's going on there inside until it will blow away to the top with ashes or red-hot lava made destructive work.

My problem that I work the same. I just publish all my works and ideas on-line. It could be named act of vanity or stupidity depending of point of view. Honestly I tried to read and tried to think like entrepreneur, probably here I haven't abilities. Creative success in Ukraine it's not even reason for jokes.

I can't make money with my writing, at least till time when it became someone else's pain in the neck. When I read and try to think about how to became entrepreneur I see that stop to work completely. After next dissapointment in what didn't work, I could create and be volcan of new amazing ideas. They are different, attractive, inspiring. This happened every time and one more time I will publish everything with free access.

What name has activity to which you spend money and time without receiving profit? Correct – hobby. All results of hobbies could be in different level of perfection. Sometimes it's enough to be cute. To hobby there is no reason to read daily new articles about English grammar and be dissapointed in received results. You can't stop volcano, it will work and produce even ashes.

Hobby bring only positive emotions, so it should be any struggles because you don't want to be professional. If you don't receive payment for your work you could became endlessly good for amateur. It opens door to attempts in drawing and design. I am not mention writing anything which took place anywhere. It's only for personal pleasure, so without rules or borders.

It looks not professional, such thoughts. I just tired to try to be “enough” for some not manageable levels of perfection. It destroys my work. I can't monitor all the time what is going on in business and be sad when find that same theme was explored and will be published or became a film. I know there are people who will make this trend and use it as reason to repeat the same, for me it's difficult.

Which logic or common sense could be in volcano? Almost for sure when I create new text or picture I will put it on-line. This is what made every person to whom this is hobby. It always made for own pleasure and for boasting. Rules stay the same, just without bitternes of guilt and dissapointment which you receive when try to use “professional” field. And when you recognize your ideas in work of others it looks like references, not unsolvable cases of plagiarism.
