

Honey's Magic.

Kate AKS

In beautiful wood lived bears which liked honey.

But angry bees made honey in the wood, bees all the times were near honey.

Bears loved honey, but were afraid of angry bees. They didn't know what to do. Each time when bears came near the honey, army of bees attacked them and bears run away.

- If there is such of love from us, bears, to the honey, probably we could ask help from honey itself. - Proposed one bear, who more than anyone else tried to receive the honey.

Proposition was clear and all bears supported it.

Once, when angry bees were far away on the meadow with wonderful flowers, bears come to the honey and asked for help from honey itself.

- What help do you need? - Asked yellow little bear, who appeared above honey.

- We need honey and don't need angry bees near it. - Said most shy bear from all.

- As you wish. - Answered Yellow Bear. - Honey's Magic!

He clapped three times and all bees disappeared.

Whole week bears celebrated life without angry bees, till all honey ended.

- What we will do without honey? - Asked one of bears.

- We will ask for help of Honey's Magic.

To their calling again come Yellow Bear.

- What help do you need? - Asked Yellow Bear, who floated above honey's jar.

- We need more honey.

- Without angry bees. Please! - Added other bear.

- As you wish. - Answered Yellow Bear. - Honey's Magic.

Since that time in that wonderful magic wood bears had enough honey brought to them by little yellow bears with power of honey's magic, instead of angry bees.

THE END.
