

Missed opportunity.

Kate AKS

- You know what are you doing, aren't you? - If Julia asked one more time, Sue will scream as answer.

- I am not sure, but I thought it will be better. - Answered again Sue.

- For whom? - If they weren't in public place, as this bar motley decorated for Christmas, Julia could scream louder.

- For me. I am such stressed, I can't do it now. Christmas in few days, I didn't bought all presents. - Sue started to change theme, because Julia had suggestions for presents to everyone.

- You won't catch me. Back to you. You know how it called? - Julia reminded to Sue teacher who is disappointed in pupil.

- No. But hope you will tell me?

- I will tell, even if you don't ask. Missed opportunity. - Julia said it in such tone, as read front page with this words.

- And you believe that proposal from entirely drunk man in the bar to have wedding in Vegas is good opportunity. It was three days ago. Why? - Asked Sue.

- I just want to make sure that you hadn't feelings for him. - Calmly said Julia.

- Feelings? I am not sure that remember his name. Ted, Tim, Tod? - Tried to remember Sue.

- Rodney, to be correct. - Said Julia and again span twilly on her left hand.

- You have amazing memory. - Said Sue. - Of course, Rodney. How did you remember?

- With pain. - Answered Julia.

- Did he hurt you? - Was shocked Sue.

- I won't say such way...

- What, Julia? - Sue quickly removed twilly from Julia's wrist and saw there fresh tattoo with names Julia and Rodney in the heart.

- I didn't know how to tell you, Sue. After that night... In short – I and Rodney married in Vegas. And after he became sober, he asked me to date, you know – to learn more about each other. - Said Julia.

- Date, after marriage. Not bad, not bad. - Said Sue. - Waiter, champagne, we celebrate power of missed opportunities.

December 2018