

Decent place.

Kate AKS

- No. You didn't ask too much. - He answered tiredly.

- You understand this, perfect. - She stood in her stilettos boots near the old house with place to boat, on the bank of frozen lake.

- It's enough decent place.

- For party with my new co-workers whom I want to impress? - She walked around the house, on little pier she stood a little longer, turned around and made few steps back.

- Dolores, what's up? Are you fine? - Asked he.

- Win, I am so sorry, really. - Answered Dolores.

- It's nothing. We will search more. I have no idea where in few days before New Year, but we will find. I promise. Sorry that I disappointed you. - Win came closer to Dolores. Moon light was mixed with light of car's headlights and snow sparkled around.

- No, dear. Problem is with me. - Dolores hugged Win. - I recognized this place, on foto when you went fishing with grandfather. It's perfect place. Really. Is there an electricity?

- Was. And big fireplace for sure. - Answered Win.

When all boxes was unpacked and chairs with plaids were inside a house, Dolores one more time checked every table.

- What do you think? - Asked her Win.

- I am not sure if prepared everything. You all the time was in front of the house and all decorations I put on table myself. - Reminded Dolores and moved sleeves of her red jumper.

- You made it better than me. For sure. Put your jacket on. - Said Win.

- Why? I am comfortable near fireplace. - Dolores looked at Win and put on jacket, which he hold.

They walked out of house. Was murky evening.

- Stay here. - Said Win and run somewhere.

- Win? - Asked Dolores and in the moment she gasped with excitement. Win put garland around the house and now light bulbs changed colour and snow shined around.

- What do you think? - Asked Win, when stood near Dolores to admire his own work.

- You was right. It's most decent place. Thank you.

Win hug Dolores and they looked at the house till started to sneeze and quickly ran inside to the warm fireplace.
